

Posted on: 25/11/2016

This wind of change is shifting the business landscape of today as more and more people decide to escape the vicious loop of a 9

A home office boosts the appeal of property to buyers. This feature is one of the most sought ones, and it also affects the value of your real estate. This is paramount since the and purchase long-lasting, energy-conserving LED fittings. Likewise, make the space look great with ergonomic furniture . This

Image not found or type unknown

Different strokes for different folks

Dedicated workspaces are popping up in gardens, home extensions, but also empty corners of rooms. They come in all shapes and sizes.

Some people even decide to turn shipping containers into modern workspaces and assemble them in for only a fraction of the time and cost of a traditional extension.

Depending on a budget, you can also let the office serve as a man cave and a playroom. A spare room does the trick as long as it is well lit and has a desk.

~~and it's not just for the young (millennials) who are the most likely to have a home office. In fact, a survey by the National Association of Realtors found that 40% of homebuyers in 2017 had a home office. This is a significant increase from 2013, when only 25% of homebuyers had a home office. The survey also found that 60% of homebuyers in 2017 had a home office, up from 45% in 2013. This suggests that home offices are becoming a more important feature in homes for sale. If you are looking to sell your home, it may be worth considering a home office as a selling point. A home office can be a great addition to any home, and it can help to make your home more appealing to potential buyers. For more information on how a home office can help sell a house, visit <https://nextaddress.com.au/blog/how-a-home-office-can-help-sell-a-house>.~~

Strike a fine bargain

Home offices are an integral part of modern living and conducting business. This trend represents a huge social change, and a demand for more space.

Author's

bio:

Lana Hawkin is a student of architecture and the editor-in-chief of Smooth Decorator. She enjoys writing about interior design trends and advises getting some electric standing desks for your home office to make it more appealing for potential buyers.

More great blogs to explore

Sell a house online: read more

Home presentation tips

<https://nextaddress.com.au/blog/how-a-home-office-can-help-sell-a-house>